Burlington, MA – (December 16, 2009) – Emptoris, Inc., a leading provider of enterprise supply and contract management software, today announced that Michael N. Romeri, an executive with more than 30 years of experience in operations and management consulting, has been appointed Executive Vice President, Business Development, at Emptoris, Inc.

Romeri has more than 30 years of experience in operations and management consulting, previously serving as a Principal and Partner with PRTM, a leading management consulting firm focusing on operational strategy, supply chain transformation, and customer experience innovation. At PRTM, Romeri sold and directed dozens of major projects in Europe, the United States, and Asia over a 23-year career. He also helped pioneer PRTM's supply chain and product development consulting practices in Europe and the US. The firm's "Results not Reports" orientation is credited with saving clients billions of dollars based on PRTM's work with them. Most recently, Romeri was responsible for launching PRTM's Business Technology Group and led the development of the firm's Supply Chain Performance Assurance program, an advanced supply chain consulting service that enabled clients to manage supply chain risk in real time.

Romeri also founded and led PRTM's telecommunications consulting practice for Europe and the Eastern U.S. This group became the firm's largest industry vertical within 5 years of its founding. Romeri also had responsibility for managing PRTM's relationships with software vendors whose solutions could enhance the impact of PRTM's own service offerings.

Prior to PRTM, Romeri served as Senior Vice President for Europe for Flextronics, the leading electronics manufacturing services provider, during a time when the company grew from a start-up to a $500 million company. Romeri earned his MBA from Harvard Business School and his BA in Economics from Harvard College.

"His experience will be a great asset to Emptoris' Global 2000 customers and partners – and also to our company as we continue to develop and expand globally."

As Executive Vice President, Romeri will lead a number of business development efforts, as well as oversee the company's strategic alliances with management consulting firms. He will also lead several Emptoris performance improvement initiatives including those to help drive customer adoption and measure the ROI and savings delivered by Emptoris solutions.
